

BAPTISTS TO FINISH ORGANIZATION SOON

H. E. Mansfield and A. Ahrens Will Visit Churches in Missouri Next Week.

WANT $500,000 FUND

Solicitation in Stephens College Campaign Will Begin Sept. 1.

The gathering of data and state statistics has been about completed in the offices of the Stephens College $500,000 Campaign. H. E. Mansfield, director of the campaign, and A. Ahrens will leave Columbia early next week to visit the churches in Missouri and to aid in organizing the churches of the state for the drive.

There are 200,000 Baptists in the state, according to Mr. Mansfield's estimate, and the 40,000 families representing this number will receive the first letter from the offices in the Daniel Boone Tavern this week. A twenty-page bulletin containing a full account of the organization and plans of the campaign will also be mailed to these families.

The campaign is confined to the Baptists of the state, but includes some alumni and interested friends of the college in other states.

Intensive solicitation will begin in earnest September 1, and on September 8, the campaign will cover Kansas City and St. Louis. On September 15, the state canvass will begin and continue until the middle of October, when the desired amount, it is hoped, will be raised.

The sentiment in Columbia is highly in favor of the campaign. Mr. Mansfield said, and it is likely that there will be a hearty response from local Baptists. Mr. Mansfield cited the fact that the enrollment in Stephens College now is forty per cent greater than it was at this time last year.

The work of gathering data and the correspondence in the office is done by a corps of six girls under the direction of Mrs. George Nardin, head of the commercial department of Stephens College.

SPORT

Brazil Now Has Good Athletes

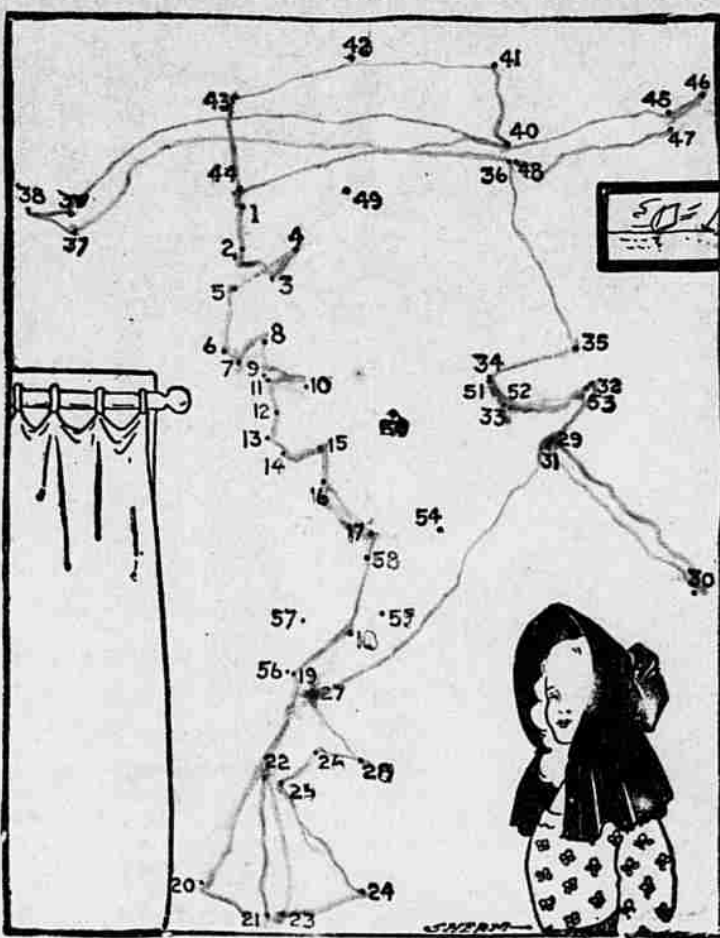

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 10 (by mail)—Amateur competitive athletic sports have arrived in Brazil, and they have come to stay. The new Brazilian trait was brought out strongly during the last month when the Brazilian athletes cleaned up in the entire program of the South American Sports Confederation held here. Brazil was returned champion in all events, swimming, water polo and association football, the national major sport.

The victors defeated the best sent here by Argentina, Uruguay and Chile, and did not lose a single football or water polo game or swimming meet. In the water the Brazilians outclassed all competitors, and former crack American and British swimmers here say the Brazilian swimmers are as good as any produced in the world.

On the football field, Brazil, after a hard struggle, wrestled the laurels from the Uruguayans, twice South American champions.

The most noteworthy feature of the series of sporting events was not Brazil's victory, but the great interest taken in the sports by the people of all ages. The games were held on the great field of the Fluminense Club. This club is one of the largest athletic organizations on the continent. The huge stadium seats nearly forty thousand people, and thousands were turned away from at least four of the seven big football games of the series. A hill overlooking the playing field was black with people, much like the famous Coogan's Bluff of the old days of the Polo Grounds in New York.

Twenty years ago outdoor sport in Brazil did not exist, as it is known and recognized in the United States. A few foreigners played tennis. Members of the English colony played cricket and a little football, while the handful of Americans spent their holidays on the baseball diamond and there entertained the sailors from visiting Yankee ships.

THE NEW BOOKS

"Reading the Bible."

"Reading the Bible" by William Lyon Phelps, Lampson professor of English literature at Yale, has three chapters. "Reading the Bible," "The Short Stories of the Bible" and "St. Paul as a Letter Writer." They were given as lectures at the Princeton Theological Seminary on February 3, 4 and 5, 1919.

The treatment is neither theological nor devotional. The Bible is considered as a part of English literature and it is discussed purely from the literary point of view. The Bible's influence on English literature is emphasized and the aim of the volume is to help the readers to become familiar with the most interesting parts of the Bible and to read it with more intelligent enjoyment.

"Proposed Roads to Freedom."

"Proposed Roads to Freedom," by Bertrand Russell is a review of the principles of socialism, anarchy and syndicalism. The author was imprisoned by the British government in 1918 for spreading radical propaganda. He bitterly denounces British labor laws, especially those permitting child labor. Judging from the fact that Thomas Carlyle criticized the same conditions during his time, the present system, after five years of war, must be rotten.

He defends the anarchist by saying that there are times when every student of social conditions feels like resorting to bomb-throwing. He claims that those men become anarchists who are more sensitive than others to the evils of some modern social institutions. The anarchist creed consists of two parts: (1) That all common commodities should be supplied free to all applicants; and (2) that there should be no economic reward for work and that no one should be obligated to work. He sets forth some of the difficulties with the second proposition, but says that gradually the system might be adopted. All forms of competition he contends are evil, even competitive examinations for scholarships.

We all know that our social system is far from perfect, but unless the instincts of man are changed, it never will be perfect. Anarchistic methods only tend to aggravate the situation. When every man will love his neighbor then will the change come of itself.

About Goats' Milk.

Editor the Evening Missourian:
It may not be generally known that goats' milk is the best milk in the world. It is rich and fine in flavor, and, if one can get the regular milk goat, it would be a fine thing for little children and old people.

There are many cases on record where the lives of children have been saved. The writer could mention several, and it is stated that few if any ever take dysentery who drink goats' milk.

There is a standing joke about feeding goats on tin cans and rubbish. As a matter of fact where the goats are well fed there is no animal that is so particular as the goat. The goat is much cleaner than the cow and can be kept in a back yard, thus becoming the poor man's necessity and the rich man's luxury.

When the writer arrived in Los Angeles he saw a milk goat that gave one gallon and one pint a day. When the owner was asked what he would take for it he said "I don't want to sell it." France, Switzerland and other countries have used goats' milk for years, and it sells for more money than cows' milk. In Los Angeles it sells for 25 cents a quart. In cases of sickness as high as one dollar a quart is paid.

The goat is death on flowers, small shrubs and trees, and if kept, they should be well secured.

Hoping this may be of interest to some one.
